Oxford Author Releases Sixth Children’s Picture Book About a Family Losing Their Pet Dog

Paws and Claws Publishing author Cameron Pendergraft wrote this touching story about a family whose beloved dog died and how they coped with their pet’s death.

GREENSBORO, NC—OCTOBER 29, 2022—This is a sensitive, heartwarming portrayal of a family dealing with the death of their beloved pet dog, as told by one of their sons.

The stories about things Titus particularly enjoyed doing and how he demonstrated his joy are humorous. His excitement on their boat rides and his pride when he brought the family dead “prizes” from outdoors showed what made Titus unique.

After the dog crossed the rainbow bridge, it took a long time before his family could talk about him. Each of them missed different things about Titus that had made him special.

Because Titus loved toasted marshmallows, it was a while before the family could have a marshmallow roast. It wasn’t the same without Titus.

However, special reminders of their pet in photos, collars, stories, and favorite toys kept Titus alive in their memories. Readers can follow along on this family’s journey after the death of their loved dog.

This book’s artwork gives readers a look at all the fun things that made Titus special and many of the memories that kept him alive in their hearts.

Losing Titus is a heartfelt book about many memories a family will hold forever about a pet that has crossed the rainbow bridge. Readers will relate if they’ve ever lost a pet.
